David Dewhurst David Dewhurst right-handed sweeper. Third gear. 11 grand pushed to Tachi. Lean angle: knees on the pavement. Deeper braking . . . Deep... Oh dear! The rear tires go out. The rider confirms. The bike stands up and threatens to drop the rider up. He fixed it again. The rear tires break loosely. The engine screamed to 13 grand. Falls! Rider breaks the throttle. The fight is over. The bike is coming down. Things got very quiet. The three-time world champion was rudely off the track. I was about 130 years old. I remembered Wayne Rainey constantly pursuing world motorcycle titles for an unprecedented fourth consecutive year. I was trying to give Kevin Schwantz some time. I was passing the limits. At that moment, I put my bike down and said, "I just lost at the World Championships!" I remember thinking, "I'm going to do this. But he led the 500cc Grand Prix championships in just one race to the event in Misano, Italy, where he signed a multimillion-dollar contract as the world's top bike racer. Motorcycle racers claim an unnatural ability to keep calm and focused on tasks on their hands, such as finding the softest spot to land while a crash rips off fingers and toes, especially around the elbows and knees, grinding soft flesh under the bone. I went pebbled on my heels, Rainey recalled. I don't know how many times it flipped. It was a lot. After a while, I said, 'All right. To my surprise, by this point, the terrible Endo series endured by Rainey's body had not seriously hurt him. But his luck will run out at the end of his tumble, as his rebellious 500cc Yamaha caught up with him and speared him on the back, right between the shoulder blades. To be precise, it pierced him in the sixth thoracic vertebrae, a crisis and weakened bones in two practice collisions. He had a headstand on the gravel, 60-0 and nothing flat. The injured vertebrae snapped and severed Rainey's spinal cord. As he writhed in burning pain, his world began to light up. My left eye turned completely black, my right eye. .m 1:29 p.m On September 5, 1993, I decided it was time for this lifeless racer to have a conversation with God.Life, as Wayne Rainey knew, was over. It's a crisp, dry late afternoon at Willow Springs Motorsport Park in southern California. The low sun on the horizon bathes the scene in warm, exaggerated colors: white and electric red shining in the leather of helmets and racers; Shiny chrome, surprisingly blonde hair. Now it's 2000. But it looks like it was 30 years ago. Dark and Tashiton Eddie Lawson, 41, is the only American to win the world 500cc championship four times, relaxing in the garage area. A little entourage around him as he trades dry one-liners with engine whiz Sandy Rainey. Sandy Wayne's dad, and Lawson's surrogate father. Just then, the blonde charismatic matinee idol of motorcycle racing, Wayne Rainey, wheels, race ready. He looks the part in black, red, white leather and a helmet. We've been completely circled since the days of club racing. Lawson.Lawson and Rainey say they met while racing a 125cc dirt track bike in 1971. Rainey was 11 and Lawson was 13. Due to age differences, they raced sporadically with each other from 1988-92. Roson said I was always ahead once or twice. But they initially traveled with Sandy to Chaperon together. Back then, when they were old enough to drive on public roads, it was just two teenage bikers barnstorming the country. As their victories piled up and their reputations increased, they climbed further up the talent ladder on motorcycles until they each took the 500cc Grand Prix circuit. Lawson won '82 Superbike titles and world titles in 1988 and '89. Rainey won three from 1990 to '92. The singer says this, " You run away, run away, oh, run away and as far as I know, that's not your chin. Thanks! This weekend, at a nightclub in Harvard Square, Belle Linda Heffern will sing her favorite songs from several popular musicals, including ThreePenny Opera's Pirates Jenny and West Side Story's Something's Come. But now I'm helping with the presentation, and I'm the one singing. A co-founder of the Cambridge-based Ariel Group, Elepern is an accomplished cabaret singer who performs at least once a month. For the rest of her time, she coaches business people on how to communicate more emotionally and present more effectively. We follow your train though and we admire you for your logic. But we need to see how you feel about things as we want to connect with you as a person. I turned to 150 people to advise on the story, which was due to be delivered. I realized it was a structured presentation, so it was structured so I could plan exactly when the audience would fall asleep. Introduce. Point to a point. Point 2. Conclusion. Pass through Nodoz. I thought I needed professional help. Listening to me, Ipern agreed. First, she said I needed more animation. Instead of using logic to switch (now that you understand the first point, please switch to the second), I need to use expressive hand gestures and add emotional colors to my face. Heffern advised that I'm not suggesting you're gorgeous. So we tried the exercise. Ipern assigned me a subject (my neighbor) and asked me started speaking. Every 10 seconds, she shouted different emotions: love, hatred, humility, happiness, and in the mean time, I made an expressive transition. (I love the people in my neighborhood and the sense of history, which I hate when I learn about crime on my block.) Time and again, Mr. Ipern pushed me to communicate with tools other than my voice. If I'm deaf - or in the back row - I should know in your body language what you're talking about, she explained. In fact, my voice was the next big challenge. Describing my voice in monotones assumes I have a tone in the first place. So it was time for another exercise related to Shakespeare, this one. During the storm, Mr. Ulpern asked him to recite a four-line verse. Don't be afraid (Essal Merman yells from across the street); The island is full of noise (Seinfeld's high-breather whispering in his ear), sound and sweet air (James Earl Jones yawns), joy and unhurt (Kenneth Branagh plays the king). The idea she explained is to stretch your voice in the same way you stretch a rubber band. It snaps back, but it's more flexible than before stretching it. The biggest problem, though, was my hesitation to pause – a common presentation flaw. I would do points and then rush into yes without sinking points. I know that pauses feel a huge amount when you're there. Andypern empathizes, but for the audience, a few second pauses are generous. 'Hold on,' she said, adding that if she didn't stay silent, she would have to take a few steps on stage or drink water. No matter what I do, the purpose is the same: just stop talking. We visited the original presentation again and finished the crash process. Who would have thought it could be so attractive? Introduce. Pause. fearful face, high voice. Point to a point. Pause. excited one hand. Point 2. Pause. Finale. Applause.Siskel and Ebert, where are you? arielgroup@aol.com Belle Linda Hlpern. They are each other's soulmates. V and Zimin, the main singer and dancer of the award-winning boy band, won the team for a seven-song soul map titled Friends. But these two had a fair fight. Next up is kim tae-hyung and Park Ji-min, K-pop idols, the relationship between the cast, and the BTS. BTS RM and Zimin | Fact/Foreheadzin via Getty Images V and Zimin knew each other before joining the K-pop group, and BTS surprisingly, these two performers knew each other before joining BTS. Yes, Zimin went to school for contemporary dance, but before that, Zimin and V actually went to the same high school together. However, they eventually moved school. Afterwards, the pair were found joining big hit entertainment auditions and BTS. They became one of the seven members of the K-pop group and the rest is history. However, these two performers Always the best of friends. During a few interviews and live chats, the performers explained that they had a fair fight. V of BTS | In fact/Imazines via Getty Images other members are most likely to argue with the approximately seven years Zimin and V spent together at BTS, and there have been a handful of controversies and controversies between these two singers. In 2019, Zimin posted a photo of the V on social media, which was in trouble with fans when she discovered the e-cigarette. During the Late Late Show's Carpool Karaoke segment with James Corden, other members threw V and Zimin under the bus, and said they were the two members most likely to get into an argument. One of the biggest arguments is about dumplings, believe it or not, at least started inconsistencies. Well, all I can say is that we fought because of the dumplings. It was, Ghosh said, really not at all about, Ziminmal, according to one fan translation, during his live stream. But it was a very important issue for me at the time. It's a little embarrassing to say everything about it. There were dumplings, and the fight was over, 'Let's eat now.' 'No, let's eat after practice,' I'm so ashamed! V and Zimin play a song titled Friends in Soul Map: 7, in which the brothers sometimes fight. But there's a lot of love through it all. V and Zimin create a 'sub-unit' within the BTS to play songs from the recently released album Map of Soul, remembering the uniform / Our memory is a movie / The dumping incident is a comedy film, according to the lyrics, I remember our uniform. The friend digs deeper into the relationship between these two performers and stresses that there is no animosity between the two. Together, the two idols play BTS songs with the rest of the singers and rappers, including On and Black Swan. BTS's music, including the recently released album Map of Soul: 7, is available to stream on Spotify, Apple Music and most major platforms.
